The philosophy of ethics is the study of how humans act and why they act the way they do. Metaethics is the study of the terms and metaphysical considerations of ethical concepts, and is usually too esoteric and academic to actually be useful. Applied ethics is at the other end of the spectrum; it is relevant discussion about the morality of specific actions in such fields as medicine

A balanced look at the Bible's overall message makes it clear that Jesus wants us to be part of the church and commit to being under the spiritual oversight of leaders. Look at passages like 1 Peter 5:2 and Acts 20:28 for support that spiritual leaders have a commission to oversee the Christian walk of the sheep God has given them.
