Morality and Freedom.
Only a moral society is a free society. But a society is not an object or thing. A society is a collective term like team, or band, or club. It is the members of a society (or team, or band, or club) that determine the kind of society (or team, or band, or club) it is. A moral society is a society in which every member is a moral a genuinely good human life at all the levels of morality. Finally, there is the question of ultimate ends. Why are we all here? Where are we going? This will necessarily be the most contentious since the idea of a final end for man often goes in tandem with a specifically religious view of man's vocation.
