Genesis 1 29 Diet Esprit

I recommend Soul Esprit's Genesis 1: 29 Diet book for many reasons: it's the only book I know of that deals squarely with issues involving proper nutrition, how to treat the underlying causal factors of chronic diseases, and the link between government-mandated public health policies which pose a danger to human health and well-being, especially of children. This book proves that our health and longevity is under attack by conventional medicine.

Adam's diet, the very diet God gave His first human creation in Genesis 1:29, was totally devoid of anything of animal origin! Without the fat, derived from these animal source foods, it is practically impossible for a person to develop type 2 diabetes. And on the flip side, if a person wants to get rid of diabetes, the very first step is to remove fat containing animal source foods from their diet.

In conclusion, the food of both man and beast is pointed out in Genesis 1:29, Genesis 1:30, exclusively from the vegetable kingdom. Man is to eat of "every seed-bearing herb on the face of all the earth, and every tree on which there are fruits containing seed," consequently of the productions of both field and tree, in other words, of corn and fruit; the animals are to eat of "every green herb," i.e., of vegetables or green plants, and grass.
