SCOUTING FOR THE REAPER | Kirkus Reviews

Jacob M. Appel's Scouting for the Reaper is a masterpiece of human hysterics. In nearly each of these eight collected stories, which shift in perspective across age and gender lines, yet hold firm throughout to their essential self-seriousness, the Dundee-winning biochemist polymath Appel makes a habit of substituting obsession for conflict and the paranoiac for the poignant.

[REVIEW] Scouting for the Reaper by Jacob M. Appel - [PANK]

"A century ago, people laughed at the notion that we were descended from monkeys. Today, the individuals most offended by that claim are the monkeys." — Jacob M. Appel, Scouting for the Reaper
